Start a Focus Session When You Feel Distracted and Get Work Done

By the end of this worksheet you will have put "How to start a focus session when you feel distracted" into practice at least once.

Your action steps

[ ] 1. Clear your immediate physical workspace of non essential items
Begin by physically clearing your desk of everything except the single tool you need for your immediate task.
Notes: _____

[ ] 2. Write down your single target outcome on a physical notepad
Take a physical notepad and write down exactly one specific task you intend to accomplish during this session.
Notes: _____

[ ] 3. Set a physical timer for twenty five minutes to establish a boundary
Set a dedicated physical timer or a simple desktop timer for exactly twenty five minutes to initiate your session.
Notes: _____

[ ] 4. Perform a rapid brain dump of all distracting thoughts on scrap paper
Spend two minutes writing down every random thought, worry, or unrelated task currently swirling around in your head.
Notes: _____

[ ] 5. Take three deep slow breaths to calm your nervous system
Close your eyes and take three slow, deliberate breaths before you touch your keyboard or open your books.
Notes: _____

Reflection

Which step felt easiest, and which one did you avoid?

_____

What got in the way, and what is one small change that would help tomorrow?

_____

What will you do differently in your next session?

_____

7-day check-in

Day 1: [ ] Practiced Minutes: _____ One-line note: _____
Day 2: [ ] Practiced Minutes: _____ One-line note: _____
Day 3: [ ] Practiced Minutes: _____ One-line note: _____
Day 4: [ ] Practiced Minutes: _____ One-line note: _____
Day 5: [ ] Practiced Minutes: _____ One-line note: _____
Day 6: [ ] Practiced Minutes: _____ One-line note: _____
Day 7: [ ] Practiced Minutes: _____ One-line note: _____

This is a practical exercise, not professional advice. Adapt it to your own routine.